An International Standard Serial Number. ISSN is an 8-digit code used to identify newspapers, journals, magazines and periodicals of all kinds and on all media-print and electronic.

ISSN 0317-8471
ISSN 1050-124X

A unique and persistent string of characters used to identify a journal article, website, or other item of intellectual property, typically one in digital form.

<https://doi.org/10.1109/5.771073>

An entity responsible for making the resource available.

The file format, physical medium, or dimensions of the resource.

A file format or physical medium.

A unique identifier as defined by JSON-LD Node Identifiers. This should be the URL of the data.json file itself
Information about rights held in and over the resource.

A related resource in which the described resource is physically or logically included.

A container for the array of Dataset objects. This field allows for separate cataloging elements/sub descriptors for multiple data sets in one record. Still used when the record is just one dataset. Explain with this:

<https://project-open-data.cio.gov/v1.1/metadata-resources/#field-mappings>

<https://project-open-data.cio.gov/v1.1/metadata-resources/#field-mappings>

Represent each Bureau responsible for the dataset according to the codes found in OMB Circular A-11, Appendix C. Start with the agency code, then a colon, then the bureau code.

This should include included with hasEmail as part of a record's contactPoint (see above example).

Date on which the resource was changed.

Provide an array of programs related to this data asset, from the Federal Program Inventory.
Temporal characteristics of the resource

The URL or JSON object for the JSON-LD Context that defines the schema used.
The URL for version 1.1 of the schema is <https://project-open-data.cio.gov/v1.1/schema/catalog.jsonld>

The metadata type. For JSON, this should be `dc:Dataset` for each Dataset or `dc:Catalog` for the catalog. for schema.org it's `itemtype` attribute.

This is used to specify a data dictionary or schema that defines fields or column headings in the dataset. If this is a machine readable file, it's recommended to be specified with `describedBy` at the distribution level along with the associated `describedByType`. At the dataset level it's assumed to be a human readable HTML webpage or PDF document. Documentation that is not specifically a data dictionary belongs in "references"

This is used to identify the media type (IANA Media Type also known as MIME Type) of the URL used for the dataset's `describedBy` field. This should be specified if `describedBy` is not an HTML webpage.
Indicates whether a dataset conforms to the agency's information quality guidelines.

Frequency of publishing. See: https://project-open-data.cio.gov/iso8601_guidance/#accrualperiodicity

This is used to identify a standardized specification the dataset conforms to. If this is a technical specification associated with a particular serialization of a distribution, this should be specified with `conformsTo` at the distribution level. It's recommended that this be a URI that serves as a unique identifier for the standard. The URI may or may not also be a URL that provides documentation of the specification.

This should be formatted per vCard specifications (see example below) and included with `fn` as part of a record's `contactPoint`

A legal document giving official permission to do something with the resource.

Use to link a given dataset with its related IT Unique Investment Identifier, which can often be found in Exhibit 53 documents.

This field should be a URL to the System of Records Notice (SORN) that relates to the dataset, specifically from FederalRegister.gov.

This field is not intended for an agency's homepage (e.g. www.agency.gov), but rather if a dataset has a human-friendly hub or landing page that users can be directed to for all resources tied to the dataset.

URL providing direct access to a downloadable file of a dataset
