Construction employers are overwhelmed with the spike in opioid overdoses. The industry is looking for ways to solve the problem. You need to learn what the resources are. The CDC has a lot of resources. Substance use disorder is manageable and treatable. It should not mean a lost job. The two things you need to do to get ahead of the crisis is to talk about it and get educated. The National Institute For Occupational Safety and Health is developing workplace recovery programs. Employers and workers together can solve this problem.
