Description

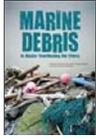

Marine debris, including lost and discarded fishing gear, can be costly to commercial fishermen. This video shows fishery damage, and tells how reduce the amount of new debris and how to clean up the debris already there. The video was produced with NOAA funds in partnership with the Alaska Marine Safety Education Association and Marine Conservation Alliance Foundation.

What others say

"We have an educational center at our wharf in Coupeville and will be showing Trashing Your Livelihood there on a continual basis, interspersed with other educational videos. We have many opportunities to spread the word about plastics, derelict gear, monofilament, etc."—Beachwalkers, a citizen volunteer program led by the Washington State University Cooperative Extension Service
