CDC is preventing violence in Delaware communities

Violence is one of the leading causes of death in the US. CDC has been the leading federal agency focused on preventing injury and violence for over 40 years.

Violence is preventable. It's scientifically proven.

When traumatic events happen to children—such as experiencing abuse or neglect, living in a home with substance misuse, or witnessing community violence—these adverse childhood experiences, or ACEs, can cause lasting, negative effects on health including an increased risk of experiencing or perpetrating violence later in life. CDC is uniquely positioned to help communities across the country prevent ACEs and other forms of violence, to ensure that all people are safe, healthy, and thriving.

In 2024, Delaware received $1,066,516 from CDC to prevent violence before it happens. CDC funds states and communities to use data to implement proven prevention approaches with the greatest potential to reduce violence. CDC scientists provide data analysis, the latest research findings and additional expertise to support state and local health departments, community organizations, and others working to prevent violence. Their efforts help save lives and improve community safety and well-being.

Violence prevention is critical for Delaware

Violence doesn't only affect victims and their families in the immediate term—it has long-term effects on their surrounding communities. Violence can lead to physical and mental illness, chronic diseases, fewer employment opportunities, childhood developmental delays, and premature deaths. Violence can discourage people from participating in neighborhood activities, limit business growth and prosperity, strain education, justice, and medical systems, and slow community progress.

Example Prevention Approaches

- Safe routes to and from school
 Job training programs
- Home visitation programs to support new mothers
- · Mentoring and afterschool programs
- Cleaning and maintaining vacant lots
- Programs in hospitals that provide social and job support to victims to prevent future violence

Violence in Delaware, by the numbers

55 homicides in 2023

18% of adults have experienced four or more ACEs in their lifetimes

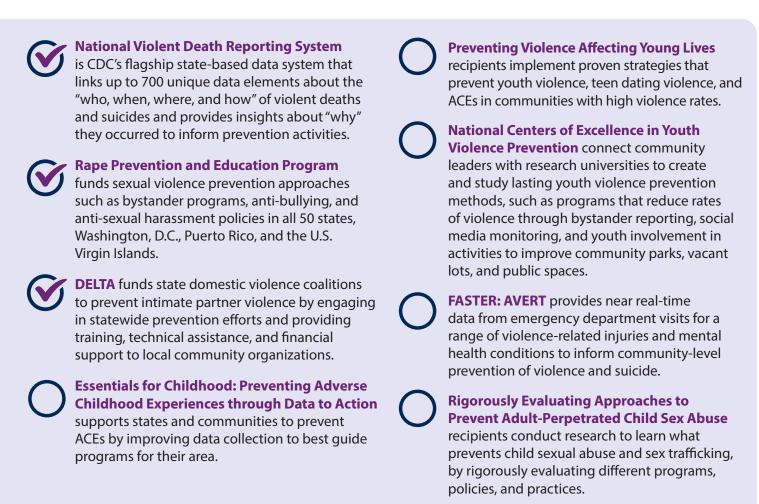

29% of women have experienced rape or survived rape attempts in their lifetimes

CDC funds violence prevention programs in Delaware

CDC has been researching violence for over 40 years—building, implementing, and evaluating programs designed to reduce and prevent violence for entire populations.

Programs with a check mark below are active in Delaware and are using the best available evidence to inform prevention in the state. Programs without a check mark are other CDC programs that Delaware can apply for in the future.

CDC Supports Delaware

CDC's DELTA funding supports the Delaware Coalition Against Domestic Violence to implement programs to prevent intimate partner violence. For example, the Delaware Coalition Against Domestic Violence collaborated with the Domestic Violence Task Force and CHILD, Inc., to increase community members' financial and food support access to programs like SNAP, TANF, and WIC, and to provide job support to the Sparrow Run community in New Castle County, Delaware. Research suggests that economic uncertainty is associated with increased intimate partner violence. Based in a community resource center, this program provides services to 400 clients with low incomes each year. By providing resume assistance, job search assistance, and onsite benefit applications, it brings financial and food support programs directly to community members in one-stop, rather than requiring them to visit a state office or other provider. The center also offers financial education through their Allstate Financial Literacy and Economic Security Workshops. By facilitating financial education and economic supports, the program is helping families build a path to financial stability. After completing the program, 81% of workshop participants reported they learned how to create a budget, 73% identified strategies to build their credit score, and 81% believed New Castle County had good financial and job opportunities for them. By working to enhance economic security and reduce financial stress, this program reduces risk factors for intimate partner violence.