In Upcoming Issues

COMMUNICATING RISK

Susan Ellenberg

The Vaccine Adverse Events Reporting System (VAERS) poses special problems in how to explain the meaning of rare injuries when there is no denominator.

SILENT SPRING CAPE COD BREAST CANCER STUDY

Sue Sweedush

A partnership of scientists and activists has developed a new approach to exploring the link between breast cancer and environmental exposures.

VIOLENCE AS A PUBLIC HEALTH ISSUE

Deborah Prothrow-Stith

Our national epidemic of violence, blamed variously on poverty, immigration, schooling, and family values, is amenable to epidemiologic analysis and public health prevention and remedies.

REVISING THE NATIONAL HEALTH INTERVIEW SURVEY

Floyd Fowler

How and why this critical source of health information was revised for the first time in more than 30 years.

OUR AGING POPULATION AND PUBLIC HEALTH

Samuel Korper

With our intense interest in institutional changes, it is easy to lose sight of major demographic shifts such as the aging of our citizens.

How will an older population affect public health?
