

PUBLIC HEALTH

R E P O R T S

FEATURES

LEAD POISONING

Lead, Mental Health, and Social Action:
A View from the Bridge 505
MATTHEW P. DUMONT

VIEWPOINT

The Promise of Environmental Sampling and Right-to-Know Laws for At-Risk Communities . . . 511
DON RYAN AND RALPH SCOTT FOR THE ALLIANCE TO END CHILDHOOD LEAD POISONING

RESEARCH ARTICLES

Cognitive Deficits Associated with Blood
Lead Concentrations <10 µg/dL in US Children and Adolescents 521
BRUCE P. LANPHEAR, KIM DIETRICH, PEGGY AUINGER, CHRISTOPHER COX

COMMENTARY

Pediatric Lead Poisoning:
Is There a Threshold? 530
PHILIP J. LANDRIGAN

Children in Illinois with Elevated Blood Lead Levels,
1993–1998, and Lead-Related Pediatric Hospital
Admissions in Illinois, 1993–1997 532
*MARY JEAN BROWN, EDMOND SHENASSA, THOMAS D.
MATTÉ, SANDRA N. CATLIN*

Lead-Contaminated Imported Tamarind Candy and Children’s Blood Lead Levels. 537
*ROBERT A. LYNCH, DANIEL T. BOATRIGHT, SAMUEL K.
MOSS*

Faith Communities and HIV/AIDS Prevention in New York State: Results of a Statewide Survey . . 544
*JAMES M. TESORIERO, DONNA M. PARISI, SORRAYA
SAMPSON, JANET FOSTER, ET AL.*

PRACTICE ARTICLE

“Patients Like Us”: Pregnant and Parenting Teens
View the Health Care System 557
TRICIA M. MICHELS

DEPARTMENTS

Editorial	498
Letters to the Editor.	498
News & Notes	500
NCHS Dataline.	576
Surgeon General’s Column.	579
ASPH Report.	581
Annual Index	585

The cover photo shows a coal miner’s canary cage. Up to the early 20th century, miners would take a canary with them into the mine shaft to detect the presence of life-threatening gas. When the canary stopped singing, it signaled the need for immediate corrective action. The “canary in the mine” has long served as a metaphor for environmental threats.

PHOTO CREDIT: EARL DOTTER